RISING HARDER AND STRONGER: An in-depth analysis of Theon Greyjoy's life, mind and the formation of his identity By Merel De Grauwe

The characters George R. R. Martin created in his A Song of Ice and FIre series are one of a kind: they are complex and realistic to the point where we can almost consider them real human beings. Theon isn’t any different: overcompensation and denial, those are the key words when talking about him. He is a character who does terrible things while on his search for a home and an identity. A character who suffers horrible torture and is thrown from one extreme emotion into another, and most of all he is a pawn to others throughout his entire life and struggles with an identity crisis due to it. Theon’s is an identity arc.
