Know Your Heart (Bounty Bay Series Book 2) By Tracey Alvarez

When the landlady from hell becomes the one woman he can’t live without…

Kicked off a movie set, actress Savannah Payne flees to her vacation house in Bounty Bay to prepare for the audition of a lifetime. Only a stubborn, sexy lawyer is currently renting it and he won’t budge an inch. Not even when she uses every weapon in her arsenal to drive him out of his mind. But all’s fair in love and war, including his kisses that make her want to surrender.

Glen Cooper needs a distraction-free month to finish writing his first novel and he’s found the perfect spot. As a lawyer he knows his legal rights, and the self-absorbed woman who doesn’t remember the night he once saved her won’t weaken his resolve. Too bad he’s fighting a battle of attraction that he just can’t win. With Savannah returning soon to Hollywood, could falling in love could be the truce needed for her to stay?

KNOW YOUR HEART is the second story in Tracey Alvarez’s Bounty Bay series, set against the stunning backdrop of Aotearoa, New Zealand. If you like heartwarming, sexy and sweet small town romances, you’ll love sharing the journey with these authentic men and women struggling to find their special someone. Editorial Review

Review
5 Stars. "This delightfully breezy read will have readers reaching for all the books in this series! Together, Savannah and Glen make a beautiful couple, and will remind audiences of the best love stories." ~ InD'Tale Magazine

From the Inside Flap
Savannah opened Daisy's door and donned her gumboots. Tomorrow she'd figure out how to get the caravan's awning up and find something to spread over the grass so she'd have somewhere to store her muddy boots. She clomped across the lawn and onto the deck, wrinkling her nose at the muddy footprints she'd created on the newly stained wood. She slipped off the boots and left them neatly to one side.

So what did she know about her obnoxious tenant? One, he was a lawyer. Two, he was writing a book of some kind. Three, he had the audacity to call her stubborn. And four - Sav walked around the house corner to a shirtless Glen tapping away on his laptop at the outdoor table - he looked really, really good without a shirt.

Her legs wobbled and stopped working. Just stopped, like a giant hand had burrowed inside her body and yanked out all her bones. How the heck did a lawyer get a body like that?

Glen's long fingers continued to dance over the keyboard, causing little quakes of movement along his corded forearm. He didn't have the beefy build of a gym rat and many of the actors she'd worked with who worshipped at the Throne of the Leg Press.

But, oh-my-goodness...still.

He had well-defined pecs and abs beneath tanned skin with some kind of black sword tattooed over his ribcage, the point of the weapon disappearing beneath the waistband of his shorts. The suit had a tattoo? Now that was something to add to her growing list of observations.

She cleared her throat and he jumped. Actually jumped a good half inch off the chair. The startled "O" of his mouth closed after a split second, replaced with a grim, flat line when his gaze landed on her.

"Sorry," she said. "Didn't mean to scare you."

"Were you aiming to give me a heart attack?" He pushed out of his chair and stood, rewarding her with the full, undiluted impact of shirt-free hotness.

Sav pointed at her feet, covered in fluffy pink socks. "I took my boots off before I tracked mud all over the new decking."

"Thoughtful, but you should wear a bell." He waved a dismissing hand. "I probably wouldn't have heard you anyway, I was working."

"Again, sorry."

She gave him a wide berth and walked to the edge of the deck. In the distance, the last light glistened on the Tasman Sea and the crescent curve of beach. From this height and distance away from the coast, Bounty Bay's houses were small dots, some with drifts of smoke spiraling up from their chimneys.

When she turned back, his gaze probed her, the question of what the hell do you want? written in every tense line of his big body.

"Aren't you cold?" she asked.

He looked down, and she tracked the movement to his chest. "Nope. Temperature's pretty mild out."

Must, stop, looking, at, the, hotness. Her gaze jumped around until it landed on his open laptop.

"So...you're writing."

Oh, great start. The scene she'd run through her head before coming over wasn't going to plan. In her version, she'd say something charming and a little quirky to catch him off guard. Then he'd laugh, and chill out enough to have a grown up conversation. Which would in turn reveal some information she could use as leverage.

Except quite a few brain cells seemed to have popped like soap bubbles when she'd turned the corner.

About the Author
Tracey Alvarez lives in the Coolest Little Capital in the World (a.k.a Wellington, New Zealand). Married to a wonderfully supportive IT guy, she has two teens who would love to be surgically linked to their electronic devices. Fuelled by copious amounts of coffee, she’s the author of contemporary romantic fiction set predominantly in New Zealand. Small-towns, close communities, and families are a big part of the heart-warming stories she writes. Oh, and hot, down-to-earth heroes—Kiwi men, in other words. When she’s not writing, thinking about writing, or procrastinating about writing, Tracey can be found with her nose in her e-reader, nibbling on smuggled chocolate bars, or bribing her kids to take over the housework.
