The Bone Knife: A Short Story By Intisar Khanani

Rae knows how to look out for family. Born with a deformed foot, she feigns indifference to the pity and insults that come her way, learning to be wary of all things beautiful. So Rae instantly distrusts their latest visitor: an appallingly attractive faerie whose mere presence imperils the secret her sister guards. But when the local townspeople show up demanding his blood, Rae must find a way to protect both her sister's secret and their guest. Even if that means risking herself.

Editorial Review

Review
"The Bone Knife is intriguing. That says a lot. The plot is suspenseful, and I love the characters in it. Intisar is a wonderful author. She brings out her characters in a way that they are relatable, and her world is one that you want to immerse yourself in." - Anything in Fantasy 11/6/2012

"What a charming introduction to our characters. My only complaint was that the story was too short, so I was glad to hear that it was an introduction to a longer trilogy of books starring the main character. I look forward to learning more about Rae and seeing how she grows and progresses." - Books, Books and More Books 11/3/2012

From the Author
The Bone Knife is a short story introducing Rae, the heroine of the companion trilogy I am writing to my debut novel, "Thorn." I can't quite remember how Rae first introduced herself to me, but I've long enjoyed her curious mix of confidence, pragmatism and self-doubt, as well as her wry humor. As I began work on Book 1 of the trilogy, I tried to figure out something of Rae's family and past. I knew she came from a functional and caring--if somewhat flawed--family. And I knew she had somehow acquired a rather nifty bone knife. The story, therefore, is about Rae before her big adventure hits her, when she's still living at home. I hope you enjoy meeting Rae as much as I have enjoyed writing about her.

About the Author
Intisar Khanani grew up a nomad and world traveler. Born in Wisconsin, she has lived in five different states as well as in Jeddah on the coast of the Red Sea. She first remembers seeing snow on a wintry street in Zurich, Switzerland, and vaguely recollects having breakfast with the orangutans at the Singapore Zoo when she was five. She currently resides in Cincinnati, Ohio, with her husband and two young daughters. Until recently, Intisar wrote grants and developed projects to address community health with the Cincinnati Health Department, which was as close as she could get to saving the world. Now she focuses her time on her two passions: raising her family and writing fantasy. Intisar's current projects include a companion trilogy to Thorn, following the heroine introduced in her short story The Bone Knife, and The Sunbolt Chronicles, a novella serial following a young mage with a propensity to play hero, and her nemesis, a dark mage intent on taking over the Eleven Kingdoms.
