Editorial Review

Review

"If every youth on the planet could get a hold of this book and follow its advice, the future of our world would be in very good hands." - Marci Shimoff, NY Times Bestselling Author of Happy For No Reason

"This is a remarkable book, full of captivating stories and inspiring examples of young people achieving amazing things by having the courage to follow their dreams. As a former professional youth leader, I have long since come to realise that, no matter what direction our lives take, we all need the right tools and the right mind set to help us achieve success.
Joan's book is packed with everything you will need to live the life of your dreams. Follow it carefully. I only wish I had such a wonderful guide when I was starting out."

Sean Gallagher
Investor on Irish Dragons' Den (Shark Tank) TV Series, Entrepreneur, Business Writer, Speaker, & former Presidential Candidate

"This book is the culmination of years of experience spent learning what works if you want to wake up feeling good about your life and looking forward to your day. This uplifting account will be of benefit not only to young people who are just starting out but also to people of any age who want to live their best life. Take from the wealth of information provided...There is no down side." - Judy Oleniuk, Ph.D.

"You've got to read this book... Joan points out that it's not enough to dream big and envision your successful future. It's not enough to learn about success. She says that you have to step out, act on and apply what you've learned...So stop dreaming and start acting. Buy the book. Read it. Put its ideas to work. And you'll be on the way to creating all of the success you want and deserve." - Bud Bilanich, Your Career Mentor

About the Author
Entrepreneur. Speaker. Author. Champion of Youth. At the age of 19, Joan was introduced to a set of teachings which altered the course of her life. Through applying those lessons, she bought her first house later that year, and was appointed branch manager of a financial institution by the age of 22... at the time, the youngest person in Canada to ever have done so. Just a few years later (after passing up another promotion opportunity), she quit her job and went to work with Bob Proctor. With his blessing and encouragement, she soon went on to form her own training company. That was 25 years ago. Since then, she has lived, fine-tuned, tested, and tweaked these ideas to make them accessible to anyone who has a deep desire to live their best life, and has shared these ideas in countries around the globe in her seminars and keynote speeches. One of her very favourite speaking engagements over that time -- for the last 19 years, in fact -- has been at the Rotary Youth Leadership Award (RYLA) camp for young adults. She sees an incredible amount of talent and potential in each one of them, and more importantly, she wants to be sure they see this in themselves. Imagine if every young adult around the globe could see within him or herself an abundance of positive possibility? Imagine if each one had the motivation and confidence to express that possibility? This has become her personal mission and it's what led to the development of the Global Youth Project, with it's mission to inspire, enliven, educate, and empower as many young people as possible to become courageous, confident, goal achievers.
